THE CRADLE OF AN EMPIRE

The memory of Napoleon Bonaparte hovers over the city; there are many places, streets and buildings reminding us that the future Emperor was born here in 1769. This memory has been made all the more precious as a result of the numerous donations to the city on the part of his family, descendants, and admirers, to which may be added the municipality and the associations who organise historical re-enactments in the city every year. Napoleon I is not the only emperor celebrated in the city, as his successor Napoleon III is too, in recognition of the great benevolence he showed towards the island.

GUIDED TOURS

OF THE AJACCIO REGION

Discover Ajaccio with our guided tours. Pierre-André, our guide, but above all an Ajaccio native, is here to share his passion for his home town. As you explore the city's alleys, he will be sure to point out THE key detail that makes your surroundings so exceptional. You will leave the tour with plenty of anecdotes to tell and above all, a desire to discover other iconic places in the city. Sometimes, he will work side by side with another expert of our region and its traditions... Here is a quick overview of the programme...

MUSEUMS

• Ajaccio, the Imperial City: the old town and the Bonaparte House

New to Ajaccio? This is the tour to get you acquainted with the city. Join Pierre-André on a discovery of the old town's highlights (rue Bonaparte, Cathedral...), keeping the most symbolic of them all for last: the Bonaparte House. Discover the mansion where Napoleon, the future Emperor of France, was born.

• Masterpieces from the Palais Fesch, Museum of Fine Arts

Explore the museum and admire the works of Italian painters such as Botticelli, Veronese or Titian. The Fesch Palace ranks just behind the Louvre in terms of the importance of its collection of Italian paintings.

• Storming the Ajaccio citadel

Originally a mere rocky promontory, it was here that the Genoese laid Ajaccio's foundation stone in 1492. Previously a military site, the citadel was for a long time closed to the public. Having recently come under the city's ownership, it is currently being rehabilitated, but Pierre-André can open its still locked doors for you. He will reveal the secrets of this citadel, which is so dear to the residents of Ajaccio.

• The Sanguinaires cemetery: celebrities and anecdotes

When arriving in Ajaccio, one is sure to notice, in the distance, the marine cemetery and its funeral chapels facing the sea, as if they were watching over the city... Experience the heart of this contemplative site, where Ajaccio families and famous figures are buried side by side: The famed Tino Rossi, resistant Fred Scamaroni, François Coty, the great perfume maker, and the writer Dorothy Carrington...

• Ajaccio and its "red gold"

Immerse yourself in the Ajaccio of the coral reef divers. Pierre-André will present the history of these divers who risked their lives harvesting the red gold of the Mediterranean. He will then introduce you to Anne-Marie, an artisan jeweller, who will demonstrate the art of coral cutting in her workshop-boutique. Discover how she transforms this red gold into magnificent jewels...

• The aperitif tour

What if the city tour ended with an aperitif at an iconic Ajaccio wine bar? That's what this aperitif tour is all about! Before getting to this stage, Pierre-André will test your knowledge by enlivening his guided tour of Ajaccio with imaginary anecdotes; it's up to you to distinguish what's true from what isn't... Upon which, Raphael, Master Sommelier, will take over. Raphael will lead a tasting of 3 Ajaccio PDO wines, whilst presenting all their characteristics over a delightful 2-hour session.

THE GENOESE CITY

Originally, a fortress was built on the site of the current citadel to defend the Genoese colony after the founding of the city in 1492. The city's density would go on to increase, before the construction of ramparts followed by the erection of the cathedral. The Bonaparte family settled in the city at the beginning of the 16th century.

THE CITADEL

Located in the heart of Ajaccio, the first stone of Miollis Citadel was laid in 1492, and it has continued to undergo transformations up to the present day. It was used until recently by the French military. The Citadel was built on a strategic site by the Genoese in order to effectively protect the city from seaborne raids. It originally consisted of a dungeon or citadel (castello) and a lower compound. The fortified castle was erected in 1492 under the authority of the Genoese Office of St. George. In 1553, following the arrival of Sampiero and French troops, enlargement works were carried out. In 1559, Giovan Giacomo Palearo, an engineer known as "il Fratino", strengthened the fortifications and separated the Citadel from the rest of the city. In the middle of the eighteenth century, with the Republic of Genoa on its knees and facing endless waves of Corsican revolts led by Pasquale Paoli, the French gradually took control of the island. The island was finally ceded to the French in 1768. At the beginning of the French period, the Citadel was enlarged in order to enhance its defensive character, with the construction of the casemates and the lower bastion artillery battery. During this period, the Citadel's forces increased, from fewer than 100 soldiers under Genoese rule, to nearly 800 French soldiers. New buildings were erected in the compound, and the existing ones were enlarged. Then, in 1789, the ditches were emptied in order to improve sanitation. During the nineteenth century, the defensive role of the Citadel waned, and it gradually became a military barracks. The Citadel was occupied by the Italian fascists during the Second World War, who detained heroic resistance fighter Fred Scamaroni, founder of the Gaullist network "Action R2 Corse" in 1941; in January 1943, General de Gaulle ordered Scaramoni to unify the Resistance. Scaramoni was subsequently arrested by the OVRA (Italian counter-espionage service). He chose to take his own life rather than reveal anything. In 2019, the city of Ajaccio finally acquired the citadel, with the aim of reopening it to the public in July 2021. The citadel is open to Ajaccio residents and the wider public, to narrate this project through an artistic, creative dynamic. Creators and visitors thus experience the same space. The construction site is open to show the development process.

A MODERN CITY

In 1801, the "Extension and beautification scheme" proposed by Napoleon Bonaparte, First Consul, marked the beginning of Ajaccio's development. Private mansions (Palais Lantivy, Town Hall...), a theatre (now the Post Office), botanical gardens and tourist areas (Grand Hôtel Continental, now the headquarters of the Regional Administration...) sprung up to welcome a wealthy foreign clientèle.

Located in the heart of the Gulf of Genoa, Corsica sits in the Mediterranean climate zone as it transitions from the Côte d'Azur to the African coast, hence the temperate or subtropical influences that may be experienced depending on the seasons. SANGUINAIRES ISLANDS PARATA POINT

Among France's most noteworthy sites.

This is above all an exceptional natural site, renowned for its flamboyant sunsets. The "Sanguinaires" islands ("Bloodthirsty islands"), as they are commonly known here, are undoubtedly the Gulf of Ajaccio's most iconic site. For air and sea travellers alike, the sight of this archipelago indicates that they will shortly be reaching Ajaccio. The landscape's coastal character, framed by the mountains, is enlivened by a succession of highlights, places that call for one's attention, and underscored by elevated structures, towers, a lighthouse, a semaphore. Among the seabirds peacefully nesting here, we can mention the yellow-legged gull, more rarely Cory's shearwater, the laughing gull and the Audouin gull. A unique flora can also be admired here, with more than 150 species on Mezu Mare, the main island, some of which are rare or even absent from the rest of Corsica, including the spectacular fly-eating arum. The Sanguinaires Islands also boast a rich, mysterious history. Many a traveller's stories, most famously Alphonse Daudet's "Les lettres de mon moulin", allude to the presence of settlements on these fierce islands. Human presence is said to date back to the sixteenth century, with the construction of a Genoese tower on the site of the current lighthouse. In 1806, Mezu Mare became a sanitary outpost, with the construction of a lazaretto, which now lies in ruins, for coral fishermen returning from Africa. The semaphore was commissioned in 1865, and decommissioned in 1955. This is a must-see.

THE HISTORY OF THE PEOPLE

The Ajaccio region's hinterland features a number of villages which, albeit at the gates of the city, have nevertheless preserved all their authenticity and soul. Today, this union of the urban and the rural is what gives our territory its beauty and richness. Alata, Cuttoli, Peri, or Valle di Mezzana are among the many villages, traditions, and communities that interact with the big city nearby in a permanent and mutual exchange.

ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY

Discovering the Ajaccio region is also an exploration of the heart of vernacular Corsican architecture. Mills, washhouses and chapels all testify to Corsicans' way of life over the centuries. While villagers' habits and customs may of course have evolved, some traditions are still going strong in our villages. Thus, when an old oven is once again put to use, villagers gather around a "Spuntinu"* to savour one of those moments of sharing and friendship that are so unique to Corsica.
